

An ancient wisdom likens the creation process to the four elements found in nature. Creation starts as thought (air). Thoughts create emotions (water). Emotions create actions (fire). Actions manifest reality (earth). In this ancient system, uncovered now for the first time, each of the four elements in the creative process has 3 guiding principles. Each of these 12 guiding principles has its own story, song, rhythm, dance and deeper philosophical meaning. These stories, philosophies and music can completely alter how we create our realities.

These 12 concepts are available in a book of stories, a book of deeper philosophical meanings, notated rhythms, m'bira/songbooks and dance DVDs. These works will be presented this year at our annual Banyumba and BanaKuma camps in New Zealand. Chris Berry will be performing these stories and music around the country, before moving on to the rest of the globe.

Chris Berry has been given the name Gwenyambira, "one whose music calls the spirit," a distinction reserved for those who have mastered both the complexity & magic of the music. Advised by many Zimbabwean spirit mediums, Chris has embarked on an international journey to share the ancient knowledge of N'Jinji using storytelling, music, drum and dance.

"Chris Berry is not only an amazing teacher, but also a hugely funny and endearing man. Every drum camp I've attended of his has been pure joy, and greatly inspirational. I leave feeling like a new person."

"Chris is an incredibly talented, passionate and sincere guide, who also knows how to have plenty of fun. Magic happens here."
